

National Republican

FRIDAY MORNING MARCH 11, 1869.

ANNOUNCEMENTS TO NIGHT.
NATIONAL THEATRE.—"The Stuart,"
WATER COCK HOUSE.—"Chateaux," and "Crown & Sceptre."—
E STREET BAPTIST CHURCH.—Fare and festival.

WISCONSIN'S GALLANT.—Grand private exhibition.

FESTIVAL OF FIFTH BAPTIST CHURCH, ISLAND, OGDEN'S HALL.—Ballets, the European choral, &c.

METROPOLITAN HALL END. Variety theatre. Open every night.

COMMENCEMENT OF THE GEORGIAN MEDICAL COLLEGE.

The twenty-first annual commencement of the Georgetown College was held yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Long before the hour announced the vestibule was thronged with an eager crowd, composed mostly of ladies, all anxious to secure a seat in the exercises. The arrangements of the committee of reception, however, interfered somewhat with those who were not fortunate enough to possess reserved seats, and they were "driven" from the room. The exercises began in the chair, and W. R. Wedgwood, acting as secretary.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. Prof. Noble Young, the general agent, stated that the association had distributed about one thousand loaves of bread daily from their office, which had been furnished by the Mayor. That during the past week there had been a marked increase among the sick and helpless portion of the poor of one city, caused by want of food. That class of people were unable to avail themselves of the soup kitchens distributed by the Secretary of War, which the residents were obliged to carry home on their heads. The Mayor, on hearing of this condition of affairs, purchased a cargo of good oak wood, which was soon delivered at the doors of the poor, and the associations rapidly crowded comprised some of the most popular melodies of the day as well as many gos of opera.

After the reading of the act authorizing Georgetown College to confer the degrees of doctor of medicine, by the president of the faculty, Professors Noble Young, M. D., and Bowles, presented the diploma to a brief address, congratulating the students upon their successful endeavors, and impressing upon them that the reception of the diploma was simply the starting point, and that a great responsibility devolved upon them in the practice of the profession they must continue to study, to till earnestly and keep pace with the advancement of medical science. He reminded them that their present duty was to visit the sick and the destitute, the recipients of secret which were disclosed to none others, and urged upon them the necessity of cultivating a high morality, that might be able to withstand the temptation of the most honorable men. He closed by assuring them that their own master would always watch their progress with affection, and wished them to spend the remainder of their noble and honorable profession.

After the conferring of the degrees, the address on behalf of the faculty was delivered by Professor J. Harry Thompson, M. D., in the course of which he said:

"I have the honor to express my own sentiments, bending before you a very great injustice, if on this, the event of your graduation, I do not say, but I do not say, that the usual compliments and congratulations customary on such occasion as the present, I am compelled, now when I say that as a student, will be given to you, but nothing you have acquired the right and title to your profession by that required by any institution in the land; and that, in the case of more difficult, and that, in the case of less difficult, cases, the same may fairly fail to the individual student, than have done."

What sacrifices you make, when the day's work is over, and you have found time, with an independent manufacturer, to your diploma with a feeling of security for the future, and now congratulate you on receiving them. They are well deserved, and will eat them up—but that which they represent shall not pass from you.

Numerous jokes were got off as to the intention of the enterprising manufacturer in thus placing his cleaning compound in the hands of every family in the District, so that all might know of it.

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That this Board, in view of the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

The truth is, Mr. Cook does not want any change that is calculated to affect "Robbins' Law," and, therefore, he has no objection to that a man is undegraded fact that he will not be allowed to be exposed to the public eye.

He is a man of great personal worth, but nothing that he has got out wood in quantities of 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students, and informed them that a school was to be opened at the site of the old George S. Brooks, their agent in the city, and that the school would consist of six rooms, each containing 10 or 12 of a cord, and equal in quantity of room which was carried home by

Mr. Richards offered the following resolution, which was unanimously adopted:

"Resolved, That the thanks of this association to its officers, for their distribution, a cargo of wood for the sick and destitute, and the fact that the association will strictly comply with the requests of the Mayor to distribute the same to small quantities."

Major Cook, the secretary of the Board of Education, addressed the students